

Release note

Email notifications

Release date: 27 May 2015

BeBanjo will sometimes send you important email notifications. We are standardising the mail from for all the notifications that we send to you, so you can add this address to your contact list.

We've also implemented a new way to deliver the email notifications to ensure they reach you quickly and securely.

This note describes what has changed in full, and as usual you can contact support or your technical account manager for further clarification.

BeBanjo reference(s)

Application	Issue	Title
id	268	Emails won't reach some addresses
chef-repo	708	Postfix cookbook

Email notifications

Sometimes, BeBanjo needs to send you emails. For instance:

- if you've forgotten your password and request an email to setup a new one.
- if a task has been assigned to you in Sequence and you've subscribed to email notifications.
- if you're importing titles in Movida and you want a notification when the job is done.

Because anti-spam filters (for instance, in Google Mail) sometimes block email that is actually not spam, we are making some changes to make it easier for those filters to identify that BeBanjo emails are legitimate.

From now on, when you receive an email from us, it will always come from the same email address: notifications@bebanjo.net. You should add this address to your contact list, to help ensure emails from BeBanjo reach you.

